ENGL 3124: Literature and Society

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 1102

Description

This course interrogates the underlying socio-political assumptions of texts and explores how they reflect and challenge social worlds. It explores representations of gender, sexuality, race/ethnicity, and social class in selected literary works, and looks at the ways in which writers incorporate these identity categories into the fabric of the text's structural and thematic elements. The course texts cover a wide range of historical periods and genres.

ENGL 3125: Literature and Science

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 1102

Description

This course explores the generative relationship between literature and science broadly defined. The course will attend not only to the many ways that scientific discovery has shaped literary perspectives, but also to the impact that language, culture, and metaphor exert upon how scientific discoveries are first imagined and then implemented. Course texts span multiple genres and historical eras, including literature, scientific studies, philosophy, and popular culture.

ENGL 3126: Literature and Popular Culture

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 1102

Description

This course introduces students to the fundamentals of literary study by making connections between literary forms and popular culture. These connections foster an understanding of the ways that contemporary cultural forms (television, film, comics, video games) are inspired by and related to more traditional literary texts. Popular culture and literature are always in conversation with each other, and this course may investigate this interchange between the popular and the traditional through specific themes, genres, or adaptations of historical texts.

- ## ENGL 3127: Disability and Representation

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 1102

Description

This course will attend to the many ways disability is represented in literature, language, and culture, and the impacts these ways of thinking have on cultural understanding, attitudes, and public policies. Course texts will span a range of time periods, genres, and forms, and may include scholarly theory, novels, films, documentaries, graphic novels, poetry, medical literature, and scientific works.

Course Learning Outcomes

Students who successfully complete this course will be able to:

1. Compare and contrast competing models of disability, like the medical model, social model, political-relational model, and theories of complex embodiment.
2. Reframe social and cultural assumptions of normality and ability.
3. Articulate the ideas of literary disability studies scholars and draw upon these frameworks to interpret literature and culture.
4. Analyze representations of a variety of types of disability and intersectional identities, across a range of literary genres and forms.
5. Collaborate with a partner to teach a sample lesson to their peers.
6. Collect secondary research on a text or topic of choice and develop an original argument for a critical disability analysis essay.

- ## ENGL 3232: Topics in Drama

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 1102

Description

This course is a study of selected topics, authors, or periods of dramatic literature. The course also addresses the fundamental literary generic characteristics of dramatic form, including plot, character, action, and setting, as well as the conventions of dramatic genres, such as tragedy, comedy, tragicomedy, closet, and narrative drama.

- ## ENGL 3241: Teaching Multimodal and Digital Texts in English Language Arts

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 2271 and admission into the English Education program

Description

This course provides students with experience in the ways in which multimodal and digital texts can be used meaningfully in the English Language Arts classroom. Students explore and analyze different text types (e.g., digital, multimodal, film and video, still images, etc.) and apply what they have learned through the creation of their own compositions as a way to develop comfort with and control using digital tools. The course prepares students to develop adolescents' literacy practices with multimodal and digital texts in the English/Language Arts classroom.

- ## ENGL 3250: Teaching Writing in Middle Grades Language Arts

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 2271

Description

This course is an exploration of current theories of composition pedagogy in practice at the middle grades level, including a variety of strategies for teaching and assessing writing while dealing with institutional policies (including state standards and high-stakes testing). Students write for a variety of purposes and audiences; analyze traditional and non-traditional writing assignments for their strengths and limitations; and develop effective instructional strategies, materials, and assessments.

- ## ENGL 3270: Teaching Grammar and Usage in Middle Grades Language Arts

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 2271

Description

This course examines approaches for teaching grammar in the middle grades. Students practice grammatical appropriateness in oral and written communication; develop an understanding of grammatical concepts and constructions; analyze errors in order to develop effective instruction; study structures as a means of promoting syntactic growth and diversity of style in writing; and develop constructive, use-based lessons. This course includes an overview of modern grammars, the history of grammar instruction, and research on grammar instruction.

- ## ENGL 3310: Principles of Writing Instruction

6 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 2271 and admission into the English Education or Secondary and Middle Grades Language Arts program

Description

This course provides an exploration of theories of composition pedagogy and assessment, including a variety of strategies for teaching writing while dealing with institutional policies such as standardized testing. Students practice oral and written communication for various audiences and purposes; create, implement, and assess writing instruction in a middle school setting; and create and practice research-supported approaches to grammar instruction. The course includes a 45-hour embedded field experience in a middle school.

- ## ENGL 3311: Conventions and Tensions in High School Composing

3 Credit Hours

Prerequisite: ENGL 2271 and admission to the English Education, B.S. major

Description

This course is an exploration of current practice in composition pedagogy at the high school level, examining writing expectations, genres, and possibilities. Topics may include conventional and non-traditional approaches to writing instruction; units, assignments, and pacing; establishing a productive workshop environment; assessment approaches; mandates and policies that impact classroom decisions (including state standards and high-stakes testing); sociopolitical pressures related to writing instruction; and writing for audiences and contexts beyond the classroom.

Course Learning Outcomes

Students who successfully complete this course will be able to:

1. Describe conventional and unconventional topics, practices, and assignments in high school writing instruction.
2. Articulate the features, processes, and benefits of a workshop-based composing classroom.
3. Produce and respond to a variety of writing using the teacher-as-writer model.
4. Use backwards design approaches to develop writing units.
5. Describe a range of writing assessment and feedback strategies.
6. Discuss the impact of various external pressures on writing pedagogy choices.
7. Design composing tasks that engage students in real-world issues.
